Overview

Jackson & Campbell, P.C.'s Business Law Practice Group counsels a range of entities from startups to more mature companies dealing with growth and succession issues. Our attorneys represent a wide array of businesses, trade and professional associations, government contractors, tax-exempt public charities, and private foundations, throughout the Washington, D.C. region. We advise clients by working with them side by side, in some cases going so far as to serve as the company's virtual general counsel, on a variety of legal issues, from the structuring and implementation of deals to corporate governance, business and vendor agreements, loan and other financing documents, employment contracts, and other general corporate matters. At Jackson & Campbell, we are most proud of the continued confidence that our Business Law Practice Group has maintained with companies, many of whom have relied on our trusted advice for decades and through numerous generations of their family owned businesses.
